Charlemagne: The Father of Europe Gary Ekborg

Charlemagne, considered by many as the Father of Europe, founded the first Empire in western Europe since the Roman Empire. Charlemagne was a brilliant military strategist who reformed his army to make it the might of Europe. He was a devout Christian set on ridding his Empire of pagans, ordering the execution of 4,500 pagans who refused to convert.

While he was a ruthless military leader, he also believed in education for all his citizens. Charlemagne enlisted the help of Alcuin of York, an English monk and scholar and set up learning centers all across his Empire. His focus to educational and spiritual reform gave rise to the Carolingian Renaissance.

Included with the book are essay questions and a question and answer section for students of all levels.

This book is part of the Medieval Archives Podcast series. The corresponding audio lesson is free of charge.
