Passion Doesn't Come without a Cost...

Recently graduating from college, Jaime Walker is a poet struggling to make his way in the world. He enters competitions, attempting to prove his craft, and finds himself the recipient of the best gift he can think of: an all-expenses-paid trip to the Reykjavik Writer's Retreat with none other than his hero, Oscar McNaughton, poet extraordinaire.

While on the retreat, the pair fall to their attraction, expressing their love intimately before they return home. But their relationship only grows stronger as Oscar tries to help Jaime's career, and Jaime becomes more restless as he realizes his career might not be his own after all.

Can they get past this little speedbump, or will their relationship be subject to publicity and independence, splitting them forever? Only time will tell...
