Breve Historia del Homo Sapiens (Spanish Edition) Fernando Diez Martin

Breve Historia del Homo Sapiens es un libro que, desde el punto de vista arqueo-paleontológico, narra la evolución del ser humano desde los primates y su origen africano hasta llegar al Homo sapiens. Aquí se cuentan los hitos más importantes: la primera evidencia reconocida de fósiles humanos descubierta en el año 1856 en el valle alemán de Neander, los descubrimientos de Eugène Dubois en la isla de Java, el fraude de Piltdown, el impresionante descubrimiento del Niño de Taung, la épica labor de los Leakey en la garganta tanzana de Olduvai, el profundo efecto que produjo la aparición de Lucy Fernando Diez Martín, doctor en Prehistoria, sin dejar de lado el rigor histórico y académico, logra narrar cómo aparece el primer género bípedo: los australopitecos y sus parientes los parantropos. Describe la aparición de los Homo rudolfensis y Homo habilis, el origen de la tecnología lítica y la competición con otros predadores por los recursos cárnicos. También consigue indicar con gran sencillez los más importantes avances somáticos, culturales y sociales experimentados por la nueva especie Homo ergaster, considerada la primera forma definitivamente humana hasta llegar a los neandertales-su fascinante y complejo mundo en la Europa glacial y el enigma de su desaparición-; para, finalmente, focalizar la atención en el Homo sapiens.
